INTRODUCTION.

THE BIOGRAPHICAL DIRECTORY has been compiled for the purpose of giving a brief biographical sketch of the representative business and professional men of the State of New York.

The form used is intended to give, wherever possible, the name, business and residence address, place and date of birth, where educated, whether married or single, names of the corporations, firms and institutions with which such men are connected, positions of importance which they hold, as well as those that they have held, and also the names of the clubs, societies and associations of which they are members; and, as such, it is hoped that the work will be found useful in editorial rooms, in business offices, in club libraries, and as a book of reference, generally, in both private and public libraries.

This information has, in very large part, been furnished by the individuals themselves, in addition to which the standard books of reference bearing on these matters have been carefully consulted; and, to insure the accuracy and completeness of each sketch, a proof containing all the information available from both these sources has been sent to all persons mentioned in this publication.

We have made this work as complete as possible on the lines above indicated, and if there are any persons of importance omitted from the volume, it is because they have failed to send us the desired information; and, rather than prepare something imperfect and, perhaps, misleading, it has been thought advisable to omit their names entirely.

The twelve thousand (12,000) sketches in this book are those of men prominent to-day in commercial, professional or other activities, who are worthily sustaining the reputation of New York as the Empire State, and the names included are entirely of characters living on the first day of January, 1900.

The difficulties and magnitude of the work involved in the compilation of a book of this character will be at once obvious when it is considered how much exhaustive, careful and patient investigation, comparison, verification and cross-references have been necessary in the preparation of the present volume. Owing to the generous co-operation of the subjects of these notices in furnishing us with so much of the information desired, we are able to rely entirely on the merits of the volume for the success to which we believe we can, with all modesty, look forward.

A book of this kind will be published for every State in the Union just as rapidly as it is possible for us to obtain the necessary information; and it is our purpose to revise it in each State every three years.

In conclusion, we desire to also record our appreciation of the assistance rendered to us in the preparation of this work by such clubs and other organizations as have furnished us with membership lists, and also to acknowledge our indebtedness to the various works of reference necessary to the compilation of a volume like the present.

DE PEYSTER, MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN WATTS—M.A., LL.D., Ph.D., LL.D., of "Rose Hill," Tivoli, Dutchess County. Born in New York City, March 9, 1831. He represents the seventh generation in New York of the notable De Peyster line. He also descends from other famous colonial lines, including the families of Watts, de Lancey, van Rensselaer, Schuyler, Philipse, van Cortlandt, Nicolls and Livingston. Was commissioned colonel, N. Y. S. L., in 1846; in 1849 at a time of insubordination in the ranks, was for "meritorious conduct" assigned to command of 22d Regimental District, M. F. S. N. Y.; received special thanks of Governor and Adjutant-General, with gold medal, and in 1851 for "important service" was commissioned Brigadier-General, M. F. S. N. Y. In 1851-3 was Military Agent, S. N. Y., in Europe, appointed by Governor and endorsed by Federal Government, while his reports led to reforms in militia, helped to prepare the North for the Rebellion, secured introduction of paid fire departments, steam fire engines and fire escapes in the United States, and led to introduction of metropolitan police system in New York City. Was Adjutant-General, S. N. Y., 1855, and reformed the militia. He was founder of the Republican party in this State. In respect to number of monographs published, range of field covered, exhaustive research and powers of acute and judicious analysis, has no peer as a military critic in American literature. His numerous works prior to and during the Rebellion profoundly influenced the issue; it is known that jealous opposition alone prevented President Lincoln from organizing an advisory military staff with General de Peyster at its head. Was made Brevet Major-General, S. N. Y., for "meritorious services rendered to the National Guard and to the United States prior to and during the Rebellion," by special act of New York Legislature in April, 1866. His hundreds of military works may be roughly grouped into treatises on the military history of the Dutch, the thirty years war, the wars of Frederick the Great, Napoleon and his campaigns, the battles of the American Revolution, the battles of the Rebellion, and American generals, to which must be added a formidable miscellaneous list, military, historical, scientific, theological, dramatic and lyrical, together with historical romance. In the words of the late British general, Sir Edward Cust, author of "Annals of the Wars" (9 vols.) and "Lives of the Warriors" (6 vols.), General de Peyster's military works "address the higher ranks of the army" and "seek to philosophize the art of war." (See his acknowledgment of his "deep obligations" in his 28-page dedication of final volume of "Lives of the Warriors" to General de Peyster, to whom he also dispatched his portrait during his last illness.) General de Peyster's best work includes his most recent monographs, written at the age of seventy-nine. He received three silver medals from Oscar I. of Sweden, the gold medal for "scientific and literary attainments" of the London Society of Science, Letters and Art, and the thanks of the Legislatures of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. He erected in Trinity Church yard the bronze statue of his grandfather, John Watts, Jr., last royal Recorder of New York City, speaker of the New York Assembly, congressman, judge, and founder and endower of the Leake and Watts Orphan House. As a gift to the city of New York, he erected in Bowling Green the bronze statue of his ancestor, De Heer Abraham de Peyster, colonel commanding the New York City troops, Mayor of New York, Chief Justice of New York, Acting Governor of same, Treasurer of New York and New Jersey, and two hundred years ago Receiver of New York (equivalent to Collector of the Port) with office at the present site of his statue, opposite the site of the new Custom House. General de Peyster's benefactions also include a college building and library, two church buildings, a boys' training school with nearly three hundred acres of ground, a hospital with grounds, a home for girls with grounds, and gifts of libraries and works of art to various institutions. He is honorary vice-president of the Historical and Archaeological Society of Pennsylvania, a member of the Maatschappij Nederlandsche Letterkunde of Leyden, Holland; a life member of the Royal Historical Society of Great Britain; honorary member of the Clarendon Historical Society of Edinburgh, Scotland, which republished many of his works, and a member of more than fifty other scientific, historical and literary societies in Europe and America.
